

December 15, 2013

Mr Michel Sidibé
Executive Director
UNAIDS

Dear Michel:

The undersigned, AIDS advocates from all around the world, would like to congratulate you and UNAIDS on the important achievements of the global AIDS response as highlighted during the UN General Assembly Special Event on the Millennium Development Goals held on September 25. We were pleased with the inclusion of HIV in the Outcome Document as a crucial area to accelerate efforts to achieve the MDGs.

At the same time, we recognize that we are at an important crossroads as we move towards the development of new post-2015 principles, goals, targets and indicators. The new framework must recognize where advances have been made: the reduction of vertical transmission; the increased number of PLHIV accessing ARV treatment; the role of communities in the delivery of services and a better understanding of the way social drivers, especially stigma and discrimination, undermine HIV prevention, treatment and care services.

But we must also recognize where progress has lagged behind, particularly on our efforts to guarantee universal access for key populations, especially MSM, people who inject drugs, sex workers, transgender people, people in prison, migrants, women and youth. Guaranteeing that their human rights are protected and that they are free from stigma, discrimination and violence is crucial to achieving universal access and the end of AIDS.

We are at a critical moment. Both the response to the AIDS epidemic and the global development agenda are converging towards a key milestone. All the achievements we all worked so hard to attain could so easily be undone if we ignore AIDS in the new set of development goals. We need to build a joint effort to create the political momentum necessary to ensure a strong global push towards ending AIDS in the post-2015 era. We need healthy populations in order to achieve goals of poverty reduction and environmental sustainability because the economic viability of countries depends on productive and healthy people.

For this, we would like to support the PCB NGO Delegation request and ask UNAIDS to call on the United Nations General Assembly to convene a High Level Meeting before September 2015 to assess progress toward the achievement of the goals in the 2011 Political Declaration and to renew the commitments to achieve Universal Access to HIV prevention, treatment, care and support in the post-2015 Development Framework.

Sincerely,
